[REDACTED] also insisted that at no time, [REDACTED]

He was positive that this had never occurred and stated that if it had, he would have told his first interrogator a long time ago.

According to [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] That was it. If he had ever known that he would ever wind up as a captive or if he had ever thought he would have been treated as he was when he was first captured, he would have never left his home. [REDACTED] claimed that when he was first captured, he was tortured by those asking him questions. He had to stand up for five days straight and answer questions. He was also forced to strip naked and stand in front of a female interrogator. [REDACTED] stated that he was extremely afraid and would have told his captors anything that he knew at that time. If he had not said anything then, then how could others think that he was lying.

[REDACTED] was then offered water, an orange and a soda. Again, he declined the offer. When asked how he felt, [REDACTED] stated that he still wanted to see the doctor. [REDACTED] was told that others were coming to take him to the doctor. [REDACTED] understood.

According to [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] When asked if the condition of his life angered him, [REDACTED] stated no, it did not. The experience he had [REDACTED] were new things for him and they gave him hope. Investigators, he stated, could go to any of his family members, his neighbors or his friends and they would all say the same thing. He was not a criminal.

The interview was then concluded. For safety reasons, the interviewing agent remained in the room and maintained constant observation over [REDACTED] until the arrival of the medical escort team.
