

2002 from the State Department deputy assistant attorney general legal advice to President Bush a terrorism was "seriously flawed complete." Justice's arguments v the United States, the United Natio the issue," Taft said.

1 familiar with the dispute.

ior leaders of the military that the said. Air Force Gen. Richard B. of Defense on a number of occas ers attached to Central Command nmand, which has jurisdiction o e the status of individual Taliba y were entitled.

d impact, according to the docum
.

the raised questions" had they known. Officials repudiated portions of the "road" arguments that were being the military's interrogation practices next at Guantanamo Bay complained to superiors. This provoked an extended Defense review. Critics forcefully expressed their concerns raised them at the action officer. The military considered the considerations that we believe were raised. We briefed reporters last month with the