This was the case, but Steve is a little off on a couple of things. I am the guy that voiced concerns over the potential failure to report issue.

Toni: Take a look at SAC Tidwell's question below and let us know how we should be responding to him.
thanks
Rob

For info of all:

You can see the protocol below for reporting in the Afghanistan and then OSC [] recollection. Here's the background from SA [] - he was with the SF forces that captured the subject in question. After a raid, the subject was taken away for interrogation and as always, SA [] along with the rest of the shooyers (SF to which he is attached) departed to return to their base of operations. [] was not present or in the vicinity of the interrogation that evidently led to the death of the subject. He wrote his after action. Some time later, NCIS came to him with a written list of questions, in retrospect he now realizes had to do with the death in question, which he responded to. He has already been interviewed by NCIS. The NCIS investigator this time would not give him any info or say whether he is a target or not. [] spoke with the Agent's Association attorney and based on that conversation and the facts above, he plans to talk with NCIS, today. I need to know from where the concerns came from that have been voiced he might have a failure to report problem and might be in trouble with us. Steve

All agents in Afghanistan who participate in SSEs are required to complete an after action report (AAR) upon return. Within this AAR, they note times of departure and return, information or items recovered, and any pertinent or noteworthy activity. I think [] two SSEs while I was there and he was out on a third and had not returned when I left. On one of the SSEs, [] was asked by the military to provide answers to a set of questions that I believe are related to the incident in question but I'm not sure without knowing additional details. So, in addition to the AAR, there may also be a second document describing his actions and what he saw.
